Judge Hughes on the Election A special from Norfolk to the New York

Judge Robert W. Hughes, of the United States District court for the eastern district of Virginia, and who ranks as the leading republican of this State, Gid not vote for General Mahone for Governor at the election on Tuesday. The Times' correspond ent said to him that it was understood that he had expressed the opi ion during the canva's that the democratic to sjority would be very large, and asked him if this was a publication," was the answer, but I always thought, and sometimes said in private conversation, that the majority could not be less than twenty thousand, and was likely to reach thirty, forty or fifty thousand."

"What were the grounds of that opinion?"

"I thought the canvass as between my friend John S. Wise and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, in 1885, brought out the full strength of the two parties in a State election, and that Gen. Lee's majority of 16,000 might be safe-ly taken as a basis to start with. I was certain that Gen Mebone could not gain accessions from the other party, and, there-fore, that on the party lines as drawn in the tions viz: How many republicans would refuse to vote for Gen. Mahone and how much could the democratic parts, by energetic canvassing, enlarge its own vote? My conviction was that at least 10,000 republimost of whom would decline to vote any part of the republican ticket. I was sure that a good many of this 10,000, probably one-fourth of them, would vote against the general. Private intimation came to me from many sources that a decided percentage of the negro vote would be cast for the demdemocratic ticket in a State election, they would continue to do so in all elections, as an increase very considerable to large, indeed, that it would be difficult to limit the maximum it would reach. Early in September I wrote a hiene in Baltimore, in answer to a direct in quary, that Gen. Mahone would probably be testen by 50,000 majority, not much less."

"You think that the disaff-eted republi cans did not do much scratching with their ticket? in the dampling. The voters had no disposition to nibble at the edge of such a dish.

Most of them rejected the whole thing."
"Is it your opinion that the negroes who voted the democratic ticket last week will continue to do so in future?"

south is solidly republican the so-called 'solid south' will continue. We can't overrule nature by appeals to reason or even to patriotism. As long as the negro vote is solid, the great mass of the white vote will be solid. It was an ill-advised step of the colored preachers to call upon their congregations to vote for either ticket as colored people. I wish the colored voters of the south could be divided on great questions of public policy and that we could all feel free to vote without reference to race. I do certainly hope that on questions of State policy, at least, a large quota of the negro vote will continue to be cast with entire disregard of race affiliations."
"Do you think General Harrison's admin istration gave aid and comfort to Gen. Ma-

"Oh yes. Nearly all the appointments it has made in Virginia have been dictated or controlled by Gen. Mahone. This was well understood. This gave the nomination to the general at Norfolk, and by so doing this caused the republican defeat in the election. This action of the administration produced our defest."

"Do you suppose the white republicans who declined to vote for and those who voted against the General (I mean the 'kickers') could be connted on one's fingers?"

Virginia at the disposal of Gen. Mahone?' "In the language of old Mr. Ritchie, who was my editorial prototype and predecessor rons. I feel no personal interest in the sub-ject." "What do you suppose will be the effect of the republican defeat?"

"I fear my party will not recover from it in five or ten years. This is a long time to wait for one at my time of life, and I am much discouraged."
